Business Best in South, Reid Tells Men in Rice Belt

Extension Service Head Praises Crop Control Program

Reid Foresees Single Farm Contract in Near Future

STUTTGART, Ark.—The best business in the United States is in the South as a result of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration program. T. Roy Reid, assistant director in charge of the Arkansas Extension Service, said Friday during the third annual spring visitors' day program at the rice branch experiment station, east of here.

He declared that farmers should be optimistic regarding the future because the government has provided them with insurance against financial failure during normal crop operations.

Forces Blanket Contract

He lauded the AAA programs and explained that Extension Service workers had been drafted by the president this year to take the lead in crop control programs. He said that the AAA is contemplating establishment of simplified programs for next year and that one contract may be used to serve all classes of farmers.

Reid said that credit finance corporations which encouraged installment buying are having a difficult time because of the increase in the practice of paying cash.

Says Farmers Need Reminders

R. E. Short of Wheatley, vice president of the Arkansas Rice Growers Cooperative association and chairman of the state Rice Control Committee, said that rice farmers have poor memories regarding economic conditions in this section before a government rice program was put into effect. He said also that farmers needed a reminder to protect them from themselves. He reported that the government farm programs have improved conditions greatly and that the improvement is reflected particularly by small banks.

Short said that rice acreage allotments and quotas probably will be given to growers by the first of next week and that the state committee has gone far enough in its checking of applications to know that the program will be successful and that the figures sent in by growers will bring the total acreage to approximately 131,000 acres—the amount necessary to effect a 20 per cent reduction.

He extended thanks to all committees that assisted in the acreage reduction campaign and to extension service workers.

TROUBLE AT MILL

Merchants Act Following NRA Order Against Local Plant

WASHINGTON—(AP)—George L. Berry, an NRA division administrator, was instructed Saturday by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson to make an investigation at Harriman, Tenn., of the situation which led to the surrender Friday of Blue Eagles by 56 business establishments.

Berry, head of the Printing Pressmen's Union, was expected to be at Harriman late Saturday.

The merchant took down their Blue Eagles in protest against an NRA order that the Harriman Hosiery Mills, Inc., remove its eagle following a National Labor Board claim that the company acted in bad faith in disputes growing out of a strike last October.

Home Loan Bond Guarantee Signed

Roosevelt Completes Enactment—Congress to Adjourn in May

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt Saturday signed the bill guaranteeing principal as well as interest on Home Loan bonds.

Adjournment in May

WASHINGTON—(AP)—There was more talk of late May adjournment Thursday at the White House and congress set about attaining that goal. The senate rolled up a two-day record that astonished even Democratic leaders and exhausted clerks who kept tab on the results.

Most of the activity was on the senate side, but assistance from the house, whose program is farther advanced, was needed to send important measures to the White House.

Between actions on major bills and air mail debate, the senate passed 165 private relief and other measures of a secondary nature Wednesday and added 90 more to its speed record Thursday.

Changes on the tax measure had reached a complete agreement with the government agency to compromise its interest in railroad with a view to sealing down what President Roosevelt holds to be a top-heavy capital structure. Another would permit it to finance shipments abroad through an export bank.

On the house side, the stock market regulation bill is the most important administration proposal remaining to be considered.

A subcommittee of the unofficial Democratic steering committee conferred with President Roosevelt on the program and one member said the president indicated he was anxious for congress to adjourn not later than May 22.

For Exchange Bill

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The senate banking committee Thursday urged passage of the stock exchange control bill to prevent recurring interruptions in the nation's economic recovery caused by the collapse of speculative loans in securities.

"That the country has learned little from the catastrophe of 1929 is evidenced by the speculative boom during the summer of 1933 which ended with the usual disastrous results to investors," the committee said in its report.

"If our present programs toward prosperity are not to be impeded from time to time by the financial collapse inevitably following artificial inflation of security prices, it is essential that the federal government adopt measures which will enable it to stem the speculative tide whenever necessary."

Bulletins

COLUMBUS, Ohio—(AP)—Governor George White has received supposed inside information that members of the John Dillinger gang had established headquarters here with the view to perfecting plans to kidnap the executive's daughter, Mary. The governor declined to disclose the source of his information, which was to the effect that several members of the gang were here and merely waiting a favorable moment to act. Three members of the Dillinger gang were convicted several days ago for the killing of Sheriff Jess Sawyer at Lima, Ohio, last fall. Two of the gangsters are waiting the date for their execution. The third member was given a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary.

MOSCOW—(AP)—The young communist league, five million strong, was ordered Saturday to undergo three months of intensive training in the rudiments of military and aviation technique and physical culture.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A re-statement by Japan in a milder form of policy toward China was welcomed Saturday by State Department officials. The policy declared that Japan had no desire to interfere with the rights over other powers of the world, but could not remain indifferent to foreign efforts to endanger the peace of Asia.

Saratoga Student Is Essay Winner

June Harris Gets $5 Prize for Article on Trade Day

Miss June Harris, Saratoga High School student, took first place honors in the essay contest on "How to Hold a Successful Trade Day in Hope," it was announced Saturday. Judges of the essay were: Dr. F. D. Henry, Frank Stanley and Dewey Hendrix.

The essay contest was sponsored by the Young Business Men's association. Syd McMath, secretary of the association, Saturday mailed Miss Harris a check for $5.

How to Hold a Trade Day at Hope

I am a student at Saratoga High school and a member of the Saratoga 4-H club, and I wish to submit the following as some of the features that I think would make an interesting and profitable Trade Day program:

1. A good program should be arranged. An excellent idea would be to have a college band from either Arkadelphia or Magnolia to participate in this program, as it would advertise the college as well as help to keep those who attend entertained. It should entail little or no expense.

2. Since 4-H clubs are very well distributed over the Hope trade territory, it would be an excellent idea to have some kind of prize or other inducement to the 4-H club having the largest membership present. This might take the form of theater tickets, in which event the theater management might cooperate to reduce costs, or it might be in the form of cash awards, or of trade coupons. Base this on mileage.

3. Merchants might cooperate by offering prizes for: (1) The largest family present. (2) The oldest man present. (3) The oldest woman present. (4) The couple married the longest. (5) The family traveling the longest distance. (6) The couple that will get married on the grounds. This list might well be extended, but the above is suggestive of some of the features that might be included.

4. Merchants might profitably make as low prices as they consistently can, making it a real bargain day for those attending.

5. The master of ceremonies for the day should be a man that will put "pep" into the occasion, not letting the program drag for a minute.

6. A good speaker and entertainer might be placed on the program but he, or she, would have to be a skilled entertainer.

7. Two hours of some sort of games or contests, such as quiz, could be profitably put on, with prizes for the winners.

8. A 4-H club parade would add to the attendance, appreciably.

9. Finally the spirit of the business and professional people of Hope would have to show at all times and places during the day, in order to make the Trades Day of youth and utility.

Dillinger Gang Is Reported Seen in Binghamton, N. Y.

6 Men, 3 Women and Machine-Guns Are Reported to Police

BUT PARTY FLEES

They Drive Off From Hotel, Carrying Drinks, Glasses and Trays

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—(AP)—A report that John Dillinger and several members of his gang were in Binghamton Friday night stirred police and deputy sheriffs into active Saturday.

A chiropractor named McCann reported to police late Friday night that two automobiles, one bearing an Illinois and the other a Wisconsin license, carrying six men and three women, stopped in front of a hotel here and ordered drinks.

McCann phoned police and told them he saw machine-guns and other arms in the car, and suspected the party was headed by Dillinger.

When police arrived at the scene the party had driven off taking the trays and glasses the drinks were served in with them.

Looking for Pal

ST. PAUL, Minn.—Beating through the Northern Wisconsin woods, and guarding highways around Squirrel lake, a posse of police, federal agents and volunteers was believed Friday night to be closing in on George (Baby Face) Nelson, one of the fleeing Dillinger gangsters.

Under-sheriff Del McGregory of Vilas county reported that the car in which Nelson is said to have escaped an earlier cordon of officers near Lac du Flambeau had been traced to a blind road near Squirrel lake.

There is no way the car could get out, except by the way it came in, McGregory said, and the posse is closing in with every hope of seizing the outlaw, who has been named by the government as the actual slayer of Federal Agent W. C. Baum, who was shot to death when the Dillinger gang broke out of a police trap at the little Bohemia resort last Sunday.

Department of Justice men in St. Paul, believing that Nelson was hiding out in the Twin Cities district sent out the appeal to sheriffs and peace officers of the two states.

May Have Escaped

At the same time, however, came indications that Nelson might have escaped the trap at Squirrel lake, as he escaped the one at Lac du Flambeau. Authorities at Ashland, Wis., about 75 miles northwest of Lac du Flambeau, reported that a man believed to be Nelson was seen in that vicinity, and was thought to be heading toward Duluth.

Then, a short time later came the report that the same car, apparently, was seen at Spooner, which is southwest of Ashland. This gave rise to the theory that Nelson might be doubling back toward the Twin Cities.

Nelson's trail was picked up through the story of Ollie Catfish, an Indian at whose shack in the Lac du Flambeau district Nelson is said to have spent two days' rest. Thursday night he left the place, stole the car of Adolph Goetz, a rural mail carrier and started on the road to Fifeield. An attempt was made to close in on him at that time, but the alarm was given last enough that he had time to slip free.

In St. Paul, authorities were still probing the stories of the persons held in custody, charged with having harbored Dillinger during his stay in the Twin Cities some weeks ago.

Jail Keys Found

Federal agents refused to comment on the startling stories from Hollywood, Cal., that keys to the Hollywood police station had been found in the possession of Evelyn Frechette, Dillinger's Indian girl friend who is held in jail here.

According to the report from the West Coast, the keys were sent to Hollywood after the girl's arrest, and were found to fit the door to the detective bureau "and other strategic places." No one could offer an explanation as to how the keys came into her possession.

Grady H. Forgy of Little Rock, secretary of the Arkansas Petroleum Industries committee, was present and assisted in organizing the local association.

The association adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas the Oil and Automotive Industries are seriously overburdened with taxation in the State of Arkansas to such an extent, it is very doubtful if the thousands of our citizens depending on these industries for their livelihood can find it possible to contribute to National and State Recovery as they would like, and as they should be in position to do so;

"Now, therefore be it resolved that our two United States Senators and the District's Congressman be requested to use their vote and influence toward the immediate repeal of the Federal Gasoline Tax, and leave this field of taxation to the individual States as was understood and agreed in 1922 at the time the Federal Tax was imposed as an emergency measure; and

"Be it further resolved, that our State Senators and Representatives be requested to oppose all added taxes

Chicago Boss Held for Possession of Bremer Case Cash

John J. McLaughlin Is Arrested on Charge of Conspiracy

FIND PORTION LOOT

W. E. Vidler, Ex-Convict, Seized by U. S. Agents, With $2,500

CHICAGO—(AP)—John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, politician, was arrested Friday night. It was learned Saturday, on a suppressed warrant charging him with conspiracy in possessing part of the Edward Bremer $200,000 kidnaping ransom.

McLaughlin was named in one of the warrants after the arrest Friday of William E. Vidler, 24, an ex-convict, who had been an automobile dealer and since repeal, a liquor dealer. Police said he served three years, 1920 through 1923, in the Illinois state penitentiary for automobile theft.

Vidler was arrested while making wagers on horse races. Police said such gambling had become a common manner for criminals to exchange counterfeit, stolen or otherwise "hot" money for untainted currency.

First Recovered

It was the first of the fortune in currency recovered since Bremer's release. Vidler was held incommunicado by the office of Melvin H. Purvis, chief of the United States Division of Investigation here. Purvis' office had denied the arrest for several hours, before acknowledging recovery of the currency.

Although federal authorities have declared they knew the identity of Bremer's kidnappers, Purvis said he hoped to gain valuable information from Vidler. Asked if he believed Vidler was one of the kidnappers, Purvis replied, "well, he had some of the money."

Vidler's explanation of his possession of the money was lacking but Mrs. Vidler said:

"Why he hasn't been out of Chicago for months. He couldn't have had anything to do with that case. If he had ransom money, he must have gotten it in a business transaction by mistake."

Purvis added that he had reason to believe Vidler had been in communication recently with members of John Dillinger's gang. He did not explain the connection.

Dillinger was in jail at Crown Point, Ind., from where he escaped with a wooden pistol last March 3, when Bremer was freed by his kidnappers in St. Paul last February 7. Bremer was kidnapped January 17.

In addition to the $2,665 in ransom money, Vidler had $435 when arrested.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN Washington

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Too Much Protection May Keep a Child From Realism

A little girl strangely shy and retiring and treated like a delicate hot-house plant from the day of her birth, found herself at six in a select private school where she could mix with other children for the first time in her life.

One day she came home and said, "Mother, that's a dreadful place. One little girl called another a terrible name and the teacher just laughed."

"What was it, dear? What did the child say?"

"Oh, I couldn't tell you, mother. It was—"

She flushed painfully and stopped.

Her mother didn't press the matter then. But another day her daughter said, "I think something ought to be done about that girl. She's calling everyone that bad name and I keep away from her because I'm afraid she'll call me that too."

This time the mother decided to investigate. "Don't you think you could tell me? You could stand out in the hall and say it through the door very softly. I'll pretend it is the other little girl."

Shocking Name

Soon came a whisper. "She calls them all, 'Chop suey!'" And then the child flew to hide her head somewhere in her own pink bedroom and leave her mother to shudder over the depravity of her schoolmate.

It was probably just as well that she disappeared for her mother was not able for some minutes to smother her mirth.

But she did some real thinking. She had followed the family tradition of bringing up its girls, sheltered and secluded from worldly contamination until they were grown. She looked back on her own lovely, lonely childhood, spent in the nursery with a governess, then later in rarified schools with high walls that shut out the world and its realities until she was almost old enough to be married.

Then she found herself married and living in a cosmopolitan city in a society that consisted of every sort of people including polite rogues and intriguing women. She was confused and unhappy with her puritan views and finally turned against all social contacts and sought shelter in a secluded country home where she saw very few people at all.

Facing Realities

She learned during that short period of distrust almost everyone because she had never succeeded in segregating the real from the worthless. Without defense and too highly sensitized it took her several years to adjust herself finally and learn to look upon people dispassionately, and to realize that many of her prodigies were undeserved and unfounded.

After a day or two she explained to her little girl that chop suey was something to eat and not a bad word at all. "Ask her to come home with you sometime, dear. I think she must be a lot of fun." Which proved to be true.

She decided that her daughter needed a little more roughage and a chance to meet the world as it is, rather than a rosy fairyland. Better for her to release that dream of perfection and learn choice rather than prejudice. She saw to it that there were more children in the house and had revamped her idea of a too tender education that shuts out realism and keeps its girls' heads in the misty clouds.

Protecting the child can be carried to extremes.

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAH POYNTER

©1934 NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DONNA GABRIEL and MADRELINE SIDDAI, who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are trapeze performers with Renfro's circus. Donna's parents, also circus performers, are dead. Five years earlier, Madeline ran away from the middle-western farm where her grandfather, ARTHUR SIDDAI, lived.

CON. DAVID, the animal trainer, is in love with Donna who regards him merely as a friend. Madeline is in love with Con. When Madeline's grandfather writes asking her to spend the week-end at his farm near Lebanon, where the circus is playing, she persuades Donna to take her place. Thus it is Donna (pretending to be the other girl) who meets BILL SIDDAI, Madeline's cousin, and goes to dinner with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

IN the moonlight the road was like a silver ribbon uncoiling with amazing rapidity. A heavy perfume drenched the night air; a perfume made of green things growing, of fruit orchards, wild flowers and the moist fragrance of newly turned earth. Though the Siddai farm was but five miles from Lebanon on the main road, Bill had chosen a longer, more circuitous route.

The car was a hattered one, badly in need of paint, but Donna, her hat in her lap, rested her head against the faded felt upholstery and drank in the night air with keen enjoyment.

"That's the Trager place," Bill said. "Do you remember the Tragers? Jim was at school with me." And a little later Donna murmured, "I'm glad there's a late train Monday. One of the girls is going to ride in my place in the parade."

"We might have asked your partner to come along," Bill suggested. "I didn't think of it. Did she think it was strange we didn't ask her?"

Donna felt a queer little stab in her heart. "She almost did come," she said slowly, recalling the scene in the dressing room when Madeline, with a sudden change of mind, had decided that Bill Siddai looked interesting enough to risk a visit home. But for Con David's jealousy Donna might have remained with the circus and Madeline gone to the farm. However, Con had appeared and to pique Donna (at least he had hoped to do so) had invited Madeline to have supper with him and Madeline had accepted the invitation.

"Your grandfather may be in bed," Bill said as he turned the car into a road only a little wider than a cowpath. "If he is, we won't wake him. He's mighty feeble these days and needs all the sleep he can get. Your coming will be a real letter day in his life. You don't know how much he cares about you."

SHE had a sudden impulse to tell him the truth then, an impulse she crushed instantly for the headlights of the car brought into stark outline the narrow, austere, brick building which was the Siddai farmhouse.

"There's Grandpop," said Bill. "I reckon the excitement of seeing you again kept him awake."

He called, "Hello there!" and the old man waved his hand.

Before the car came to a stop at the front porch Donna had an opportunity to look at her hosiery. She was tall and very erect. Her snow white hair curled slightly and touched the collar of the dress.

"You've changed," Mrs. Planter said to the girl. "I wouldn't have known you."

"Did Madeline come?" the old man asked as Bill sprang into the three steps to his side.

"Here she is!" Bill beckoned to Donna who was just behind him. "Grandfather," she whispered huskily. "Grandfather."

Groping garbled hands reached for her; old arms enfolded her. "Maddie, my little Maddie!" The girl pressed her face against his shoulder, hoping he would not notice how fast her heart was beating. "I've wanted you for such a long time and now I can't even see you."

"I know," she choked, tears in her throat. "Bill told me—you are blind. Oh, I'm so sorry, so sorry!"

"That's all right, Maddie," he answered, patting her curls with trembling, affectionate fingers. "I'm old and affliction doesn't matter so much to an old fellow. Only I've missed you and wanted you. But there, there! We're not going to be sad for the little time you are here. There must be a heap more you got to tell me and a heap more I want to know. Come in, please. Mrs. Planter laid out some supper for you."

In books Donna had read of just such a room—quiet, homely, intimate, but containing something between the four walls that she had looked for all her life. There were rocking chairs with lace squares on their backs, a "whatnot" in the corner with china bric-a-brac on its shelves, a reading lamp beside a stand holding a huge family Bible. On the big center table a vase of purple and white lilacs stood and beneath a napkin the supper was laid out. Donna's glance rested upon an enlarged photograph on the wall, the picture of a small girl with long, fair, curling hair and wide, questioning eyes. Madeline, of course.

"It doesn't look much like you now," Bill said.

THE old man's faltering steps led him to the chair beside the Bible. "Maybe you don't hold with prayer now, Maddie," he said, "but I want to thank God that He sent you to me before the call came."

"Oh Grandfather!" she cried. She dropped on her knees beside him, feeling suddenly that this was her home, this old man, whose feet touched the precincts of death, was her relative. "Oh, Grandfather!"

In the midst of the simple prayer a door opened and the housekeeper, Mrs. Planter, came into the room. Instantly the spell vanished. Donna felt the antagonism of the woman. Though Mrs. Planter's thin, grey parted in a smile, though she extended her hand in cordial greeting, her pale eyes between white lashes informed Donna she was not welcome.

"I reckon you find your grandpa changed a lot," she said. "He's been falling fast this past year. And you've changed too. Yes, you've changed. I wouldn't have known you."

"Five years make changes in every one," Donna answered bravely. "You ought to be in bed, Amos."

Tissue Cream Ably Substitutes for Muscle Oil or Astringents

Too many cosmetics on a dressing table can be quite confusing. The wise woman makes a careful and thorough diagnosis of her skin before she buys the extras and then figures out a schedule whereby she'll have adequate time to use each one of them.

For instance, muscle oil corrects fine lines around the eyes and there's no use in buying a bottle of it in addition to a jar of eye astringent cream. Of course, if the budget allows and you're sure that you'll have time to use both preparations, it's fine to go ahead and get them. If not, get only one of them—the one that you think you will need the most.

Girls who cannot afford either muscle oil or astringent eye cream will have to use tissue cream as a substitute for both. And it's a perfectly adequate substitute providing the skin hasn't been neglected for too long a period. Simply put the tissue cream around your eyes, pat it into the lines across forehead and throat and leave it on all night. If it's rich in beneficial oils, there's no reason why it won't improve the texture of your skin and, at the same time, eradicate the lines.

Don't worry too much about the things you can't include on your list of new spring cosmetics. Learn to use the preparations that you do have in an intelligent and conscientious manner and you're sure to get excellent results.

Faith met me with a smile a while ago,
Laughed at my fears and cheered my heart aglow.
Hope took a brush and painted all my woes
With rainbow brightness—blue and gold and rose.
Then someone took my pack of dusty care
And whispered, softly: "You and I will share."
Then I was brave again—for Love was there.

Political Scandal Cases Are Dropped

Fayetteville Prosecutor Nolle Prosses County Indictments

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — While the Washington county grand jury was debating whether to return an indictment against State Comptroller Griffin Smith, Prosecuting Attorney J. W. Trimble stepped before the bench of Circuit Judge John S. Combs Friday and used about three minutes to nullify many months' work of Smith and his assistants; and to set a precedent for the handling of criminal procedure in Arkansas.

A remarkable feature of the case was that the defense had been allowed to summon 200 witnesses. Had it been necessary to have paid all of the money for the trial, the drain on the county's depleted finances would have created a serious situation and this is said to have been one of the factors entering into Prosecuting Attorney Trimble's decision.

Prosecutor Trimble nolle prossed 74 indictments against eight men who had been charged with perjury and subornation of perjury in connection with the handling of affairs of Washington county.

Kiwanis to Visit Saratoga Friday

Grady H. Forgy Addresses Regular Club Dinner Here

At the regular meeting of the Kiwanis Friday night, plans were discussed for the good will trip to Saratoga next Friday.

The meeting was presided over by Charles Dana-Gibson, president of the club. Detailed reports of the Kiwanis conference, held at Pine Bluff last Thursday, were given by W. S. Atkins and Sid Bundy.

The guest speaker of the evening was Grady H. Forgy, secretary of the Arkansas Petroleum Committee, of Little Rock. His speech centered on the threat of additional gasoline tax by the federal government. A resolution, protesting the increase, was passed by the club, to be forwarded to congress.

Those whose indictments were nolle prossed were:

Former County Judge J. Lora Slaughter, 19 indictments for subornation of perjury.

Jess Gover, father of Sheriff Harvey Gover, two indictments for perjury.

Otis Cardwell, four indictments for perjury.

Bert Watson, 20 indictments for subornation of perjury and six for perjury.

R. B. Frederick, 18 indictments for perjury.

Mike Flynn, one indictment for perjury.

C. S. Smith, two indictments for perjury.

For more than two days the grand jury has been considering the indictment of Comptroller Smith on a charge of perjury in connection with his testimony before the jury at the time the indictments of the former officials were returned.

This is an open secret on Fayetteville streets, and Prosecutor Trimble admitted that he had refused to draw an indictment against the comptroller.

Hoover Helped in Utility Publicity

Former President Aided in Publication of Pamphlet

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Report of a legislative committee put into the record of the House of Representatives Friday said that former President Hoover, while secretary of commerce, aided in the publication of a pro-utilities pamphlet.

The report, put into the record by W. T. Chittland, attorney for the commission, was that of a Pennsylvania Joint Legislative Committee covering an unidentified utilities investigation.

Other evidence given, the commission purported to show that a utilities executive sought the aid of President Taft, when he was chief justice, of his brother, Charles Taft, and of James Francis Burke, late counsel of the Republican National Committee. No evidence was given to indicate such aid was received.

In the Pennsylvania report, Samuel S. Weyer, engineer and author of the pamphlet, was quoted as saying that the pamphlet would not have been printed for 90 days had not Hoover intervened to get it done quickly because of its effect, undescribed by the witness, on the St. Lawrence waterway project, in which Hoover was said to be interested. Weyer was a witness at Friday's hearing.

The Weyer pamphlet was entitled, "Niagara Falls, Its Power Possibilities and Preservation." This pamphlet has been assailed several times by other witnesses, and was the subject of considerable controversy because of its first publication by the Smithsonian Institution. The institution's imprimatur was said by the critics to give the appearance that a governmental body endorsed the report.

Thompson sent the memorandum to Burke, and suggested that Burke give it to Charles Taft, "with the idea of getting it before his brother (the chief justice) who is chancellor of the Smithsonian Institution."

New Budget Plan for Methodists

Bishop Cannon Scheduled to Join Conference Sunday

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Delegates to the quadrennial sessions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Friday laid out the delicate question of limited terms for the episcopacy and turned to an examination of a proposed new budgetary system for the church.

With little discussion, the 500 lay and clerical representatives of the denomination's 48 conferences and missions grouped all petitions and resolutions relating to bishops' tenure and ordered them brought to the floor for action as special order of business next Thursday. Bishops presently are elected to serve until they are 72.

Tuesday was reserved for the election of the newly created Judicial council, a nine-member group which will be a sort of "Supreme Court of Appeals" to review questions previously referred to the College of Bishops. The bishops today handed the conference 36 nominations for the board and nominations from the laity will be received tomorrow. Five lay-

Italy Prepares to Expand Her Army

King Victor Emmanuel Cheered in Speech Before Parliament

ROME, Italy—(AP)—King Victor Emmanuel declared Saturday that while Italy ardently desires peace she will increase the strength of her military force in the conviction that this is the first guarantee of peace.

The king was cheered roundly as he made this declaration at the opening of the 29th parliament since Italy became a united kingdom in 1930.

"My government," the king said, "will argue and perfect the efficiency of the armed forces, which rests on three points: Officers, materials, and unity of preparation."

Hooks and Slides
by Bill Braucher
Color—that's a great word in sports. It drags the fish through the gate and makes the magpies and the promoters chortle with glee, rubbing their hands and smacking their lips in a manner most offensive to one not commercially minded.
Color makes lousy food out of many otherwise ordinary athletes—and if it's splashed the wrong way it makes bums out of others far more gifted.
For want of a more pleasant subject, we'll take up the case of Arthur—once facetiously nicknamed "The Great"—Shires. Color was a curse to Shires, because it was the wrong hue, though it did give him a better break in the big show than his talents justified.
After a profane, bullying swagger tour through both major loops, Arthur is back in the A. with Toled, lucky to be in such high society, all because he yammered out of turn, long, loud, and often.
"Rabbit" is Fast Color
That's one kind of color. And then we come to "Rabbit" Maranville, who's fast color. His recent mishap stirred more genuine sympathy than has been accorded any other athlete in misfortune in recent years. He was a wild blade in his day, this great little madcap, but the fans went great for his style.
Leaning the Shires way is another "great," in the person of "Dizzy" Dean. But "Dizzy" has the talent that goes with it, so he's riding high as a gate attraction.
Up from the minors comes another big ballplayer in Buck Newsome, who looks as if he'd make the grade as a starting hurler in Rogers Hornsby's menage. Modesty is not in Buck's vocabulary, as witness his wired challenge to Dean to look hours with him in the first game of the St. Louis city series—in which Buck was blasted from the slab in four innings.
Yes, it's a great attribute. It made Casey Stengel manager of the Doleful Dodgers, though he'll probably rue the day it did. It has given fat salary checks to Nick Altrock and Al Schacht for lo, these many years. It put Blondy Ryan in the spot where he became a world series hero. It makes them—and it breaks them.
Rosy Hued for Sox
Not only in baseball does color bring 'em to the front. There's Walter Hagen in golf, Bill Tilden and Leo Stofen in tennis, "Red" Grange in football, Joe Savoldi—and most of the rest of them—in wrestling.

Intensive Feeding Bad for Dairying

Reduce Grain Ration and Increase Roughage, for Profit

Less intensive feeding is one of the more effective ways by which dairy farmers can bring about the reduction of output proposed in the tentative dairy program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration according to information received Friday by Frank Stanley, county agent.

Experiments show that by reducing the grain ration and feeding more roughage greater profit may be made on a lower milk yield.

"When we have good roughage to feed and cut our full grain ration in two, we get approximately 10 per cent less milk than on full grain feeding," says Mr. Stanley. "When we depend on roughage alone, we get about 30 per cent less milk than we get on full grain feeding."

"This drop in production does not involve a corresponding drop in profits. Dairy farmers who plan to feed less grain and grow more roughage will benefit themselves and also agriculture as a whole."

"Less intensive feeding of dairy cattle involves an increase in pasture and roughage acreage at the expense of cultivated crops, a shift already taking place in many regions. It helps to solve the grain surplus problem, and to reduce the output of livestock products."

"The dairy farmer's gross income may be less if he has less cows on roughage and pasture, but his costs of production will be less also. It is net income rather than gross income that counts."

"Erosion losses are terrific on land in cultivated crops. This same land in pastures and legumes would be protected. Cultivated crops are hard on soil fertility. Pastures and legumes are a partial answer to this problem."
